RTS will participate as a panelist and sponsor in the 2018 Latin American Natural Resources seminars of Willis Towers Watson in Mexico City and Bogotá.

The theme of the conference goes around “The Changing Face of Natural Resources Risk” facing the statement that the one constant in our industry is change: changes in technology, in the political climate, in commodity prices and in risk management strategies and methodologies.

However, are the Natural Resources industries in LATAM keeping up with these changes? Are overall risks costs being managed as effectively as possible? Can today’s Risk Managers add more value to their companies by adopting more sophisticated solutions that perhaps have been unavailable to them in the past?

All these questions will be answered at the seminars, where Juan Guillermo Uribe, RTS Regional Director, will participate on May 24th in Bogota at the Loss Adjuster panel roundtable discussion regarding “Complex Claims” subject.

Juan Miguel Alvarez, RTS Director in Mexico, will participate on May 22th in the same panel discussion in Mexico City.

The agenda is likely to include as well diverse range of topics, including construction, energy, catastrophic risks, cyber risk, environmental risk, the geopolitical situation in Latin America, etc. As in previous years, the events will feature various industry leaders in risk management and insurance, key underwriter personnel from the Latin American and London markets.

Relevant insurance professionals from Scor, Talbot, Mapfre, Swiss Re, Starr, Liberty, Allianz, Munich Re, Inbursa, AIG, GNP seguros, among others will share their knowledge and experience in Latin America.

A team of RTS executives will be present as well during this remarkable annual event to field questions for anyone interested in finding out about the company’s dimensions and the latest developments.
